checked out vehicle and found cranking over engine, it had no signs of compression. fault code check - p0128 - low coolant temp fault code stored prior to fauilure per mileage logged. checked to make sure timing chain and valves were still working. all working correctly. vehicle out of coolant. added water to cooling system to see if it would hold liquid. It does not, water pours out as fast as put in. removed intake manifold for access to coolant leak. found coolant manifold at front of motor blown open causing a huge coolant leak. all of the coolant leaked out and caused the engine to overheat. It appears that it overheated bad enough to oval the cylinder walls causing no compression. performed a compression test and all 8 cylinders have 0 psi compression performed tear down on engine to verify failed components. cylinders are no longer round and heads warped beyond repair. . engine is beyond repair, needs new engine assembly, customer authorized ling block assembly. removed engine and replaced with supplied engine. filled with oil, coolant. also topped off front differential as it leaked out when removed for engine. topped off
